About the Performers

Jennifer Silipino received her bachelor's in music education from The College of New Jersey where she studied flute with David DiGiacobbe. She currently teaches seventh and eighth grade band in the Manalapan-Englishtown Regional Middle School and maintains a private flute studio in Bordentown, New Jersey.

In addition to teaching Ms. Silipino takes an active role in the flute community performing as a freelance artist in the tri-state area. Ms. Silipino has participated in many master classes throughout the area with prominent flutists such as Jeanne Baxtresser, Jeffrey Khaner, Gary Shocker, and Susan Glaser. She currently serves as a board of directors member for the Philadelphia Flute Society and participates in the New York Flute Club.

Ned Perwo is Director of Music at Holy Trinity Evangelical Lutheran Church in Manasquan, NJ. A graduate of The College of New Jersey (formerly Trenton State College), Mr. Perwo received a B.M. in Music Education, piano/choral concentration in addition to extensive training in trombone, voice, and choral/orchestral conducting.

At Holy Trinity, Mr. Perwo oversees an extensive music program which includes an Adult Choir, two RSCM affiliated Children's Choirs, and a variety of youth instrumentalists. In addition to the traditional aspects of the music program, Mr. Perwo leads "Joyful Nosie", Holy Trinity's contemporary worship ensemble.

When not behind the console or conducting an ensemble, Mr. Perwo enjoys preparing dishes by his favorite chef "The Barefoot Contessa", entertaining his very fat cat "Mahler", and working on websites for Holy Trinity's music ministries and the Monmouth County chapter of the American Guild of Organists.
